

August 18, 2015, excerpted from ICAP, translated by Tom Whitney

www.icap.cu

Among the headlines, analysis and welcome comments about the reopening of the U.S. Embassy on the island, President Maduro stressed that Cuba, in restoring relations with the United States without giving up its policies of revolutionary democracy, has given the world a lesson in the diplomacy of dignity. He commented also that, “The Cuba of yesterday is the Cuba of Fidel, of Raul. It’s the Cuba standing up and independent, the Cuba that is the sister nation of Bolivarian Venezuela, with its own personality and its pride, that comes from Martí.”